Report	On August 6, 2024, the Department of English and the Department of Tamil at Auxilium College of Arts and Science for Women jointly organized a one-day state-level workshop titled “Translation as Reception.” The workshop aimed to explore the concept of translation from the perspective of how translated texts are received and interpreted by diverse audiences, shedding light on the intricate dynamics of translation and its role in cross-cultural communication. The event commenced with a solemn inaugural session, beginning with a prayer that set a reverent tone for the day. Dignitaries were invited to participate in the traditional lamp-lighting ceremony, symbolizing the divine presence and blessings on the event. This act of lighting the lamp symbolized enlightenment and guidance for all the participants. Following the prayer, Ms. B. Suganya, Assistant Professor, Department of English, extended a warm welcome to the esteemed dignitaries: Sr. Soosai Magnificat, Secretary of Auxilium College, Dr. Sr. Sebasti Jeya Pushpam, Principal, Dr. Sr. Santiagu Theresal, Vice Principal, the chief guest of the day, Dr. R. Shanthi, and the participants, which included faculty members and students from various institutions. The workshop drew an impressive 176 participants from different institutions, creating a rich platform for academic exchange and learning. The inaugural session concluded with the program being officially handed over to the chief guest, Dr. R. Shanthi, a renowned expert in the field translation studies, to lead the workshop. Session I: Understanding the Fundamentals of Translation In the first session, Dr. R. Shanthi provided an insightful and comprehensive introduction to the field of translation. She began by defining translation and its essential features, delving into the complexities of balancing theoretical and practical aspects of the discipline. The session highlighted the key challenges faced by translators, such as maintaining fidelity to the source text while ensuring the translated version resonates with the target audience. Dr. Shanthi emphasized that translation is not a mere linguistic exercise but a cultural and interpretative process, wherein the translator serves as a bridge between two languages and cultures. Participants gained a deeper understanding of how translation impacts the reception of texts, influencing how different audiences perceive meaning.

Session II: Hands-On Translation Practice

The second session of the workshop was a practical session aimed at providing participants with real-world experience in translation. Dr. Shanthi instructed the students to translate passages she provided, allowing them to apply the concepts discussed in the earlier session. This interactive activity engaged the participants in the practical aspects of translation, offering them valuable hands-on experience.

Students were encouraged to consider not only the linguistic accuracy of their translations but also how cultural nuances and audience expectations shape the reception of translated texts. This exercise reinforced the idea that translation is an interpretive process requiring sensitivity to both language and cultural context.

At the conclusion of the workshop, Ms. S. Saraswathi, Assistant Professor, Department of English, delivered the vote of thanks, expressing gratitude to the chief guest, dignitaries, organizing committee, and participants for their contributions to the success of the event.

The workshop proved to be a highly productive and enlightening experience, successfully exploring the complex dynamics of translation. It fostered a deeper understanding of the crucial role audiences play in shaping the outcomes of translated works. Participants left with enriched knowledge of translation as both a linguistic and cultural process, and the hands-on activities provided them with practical skills to apply in future translation endeavors.

Overall, the one-day state-level workshop on "Translation as Reception" was a resounding success, leaving participants with new perspectives on the field of translation and its broader impact on communication and culture.
